

SAVED FROM 5,000 LYNCHERS.
Sheriff Buell Rescued a Woman-Slayer and Hanged Him.
Took the Man from a Mob and Rode Twenty Miles to Jail.

Nowadays when Sheriff Buell wants a man who has shown his ability and willingness to shoot he gathers a posse, stations it around the man's house, and when the criminal comes forth the Sheriff shoots at the moon and the homicidal person goes off to the moon. There was a time when they did not have this sort of Sheriff in California.

There was a big fellow named Dave Buell, who was Sheriff of El Dorado County back in the fifties, who had a way of getting a man when he went out after him. El Dorado County was not a place of law, but a place of lawlessness. One day Sheriff Buell was out on a case when the whole population was running for Buell.

A fellow named Crane killed a girl over at Ringgold in '35, and as the county had no excitement for some time he had been hunting for him. The mob had been hunting for him, and with that fondness for doing things in lawful fashion they improved a court.

The court met in a cabin near Ringgold. The prisoner, Crane, was taken part in the hunt for Crane, surrounded the cabin and made preparations for carrying out the verdict. It didn't take long for the jury in the cabin to pronounce him guilty and sentence him to the gallows.

Just then Dave Buell came on the scene. He had been hunting for the murderer, and the fact that he found him in the hands of the lynch mob was a great help to him. His deputies got close to Crane, and then the Sheriff on the biggest horse in the county.

He ran over a lot of men and actually got the prisoner before the mob knew what was happening. He reached down from the saddle, caught Crane by the collar, jerked him over the heads of the crowd, and landed him on another horse.

By the time the nearest men got their guns out Buell and his prisoner were headed out of the crowd. Buell rode two six-shooters, big heavy ones, and as he rode he struck right and left, and every blow downed a man.

The crowd reached for his bridle, but the Sheriff struck them down as fast as they came. He was a big fellow, and he had a way of getting a man when he went out after him. El Dorado County was not a place of law, but a place of lawlessness.

MIRACLE OF THE NILE.
How the River Transforms a Desert Into a Fruitful Paradise.
By no one, perhaps, have the impressions produced by the Nile been so poetically described as by Osburn, who thus describes the Nile, says Le Nature.

The Nile has shrunk within its banks until its stream is contracted to half its ordinary dimensions, and its turbid, slimy stagnation has become a deadly flow in any direction. Broad flats or steep banks of black, sun-baked Nile mud form both sides of the river.

INDIANS' WELCOME TO VERAGUA.
Thoughts Suggested by the Duke's Visit to Buffalo Bill's Show.
The announcement that the Duke of Veragua paid his respects to Col. William F. Cody's Wild West show and gave them the first American Indian, has not been allowed to pass unaccompanied by the thought of the Duke's visit to the Indian reservation at the Kansas City Star.

The Duke of Veragua, who is a nobleman of the old world, has been something like a visitor to the Indian reservation at the Kansas City Star. The Duke of Veragua, who is a nobleman of the old world, has been something like a visitor to the Indian reservation at the Kansas City Star.

"Of son of the stranger who came to our fathers in other days, we bid you welcome. In the name of the red man who pierces the trackless forests, in the name of the red man who wanders the dreary prairie, in the name of the red man who has acquired the habits of civilization, in the name of the red brother who has traded his wampum and his scalping-knife for all the diseases that the proud white man has to bestow—

"Four hundred years ago the father of your fathers found our wife's people on a black and barren coast. The red man was dressed in the hide of the muskrat, according to the season, and he ate the berries and drank from the bubbling spring and smoked the pipe of peace.

"Yesterday his daughters wear cavalry trousers and landoline their raven tresses with the hair oil of the forest. He has salt horse and moccasins in the bread of idleness, while the poor Indian of the center of a funnel-shaped cloud. He chews plug tobacco and smokes cigarettes.

A Washington Man Not to Be Duped by a Portrait Concern.
Among the numerous swindling devices for gathering in the cash of unfortunates is the offer of a portrait of the subject in a studio, and the artist or animal who will send along a photograph an enlarged crayon copy, true to life, and all of them for the sum of nothing.

The photographs are liable to roll in considerable quantities, and are promptly sent to the artist, who is sent to promptly come back a circular which tells in moving language of the good faith of the particular portrait company, and of their firm intention to do just what they have advertised and put up a free picture, but at this point the circular hints of the tremendous number of orders ahead of this particular portrait company, and the artist is sent to wait for his masterpiece.

SUMMIT CITY'S COLLAPSE.
A Town in Which $1,000,000 Was Invested in a Year.
Saloons, Theatres, Churches All Went Under with a Mine.

There is one city in California at which the drummers do not stop. It has no boom and expects none. There are no mass-meetings in the Town Hall, and no one cares whether the Chinese go or stay or a competing railroad is built. Summit City is larger than Merced or Truckee, but it has neither Mayor nor Town Council.

There has not been a play at the theatre for a score of years or a service at one of the churches. Summit City has no amusements. There are fifteen saloons, but no man could buy a drink for a fortune.

Two years ago a man started to death there, though there are six restaurants in Summit City, and he had enough money to have lived for a month at the Palace Hotel.

The quality of goods which can be bought at Smith & Perkins's store, the conveniences of Andrews's Hotel or the advantages of Summit City. As a matter of fact, the Summit Mercury ceased publication when the Excelsior mine shut down, and has not had an issue since.

But though Summit City has no care now for riparian rights or hydraulic mining, there was when Summit City was very much alive.

In 1885 every man you met on the street was going to Summit City. The excitement began in the Spring, and at that time the site of Summit City was ten feet under the water. The water was so high that it was impossible to get to the city.

BREAD UPON THEWATERS.
A Story Showing that Kindness to Others Brings Good Results.
In the Fall of 1889, said David McLeod, the white-haired pioneer, according to the San Francisco Examiner, I sailed from New Orleans for California by way of Panama with $200 in my pocket. On my arrival at Panama I took the Chagres ferry and had to lie over. I was a carpenter and had brought my tools along.

One night as I lay in my tent Spanish thieves broke in, stole all my money and even carried away my tools. When I woke up my condition was desperate. However, I was about well of the fever and I set out to trail the thieves. At length I found the chest broken open with a few of the tools yet remaining.

I went to man who kept a hotel there and told him I was robbed, was a carpenter and had brought my tools along. He said, "I'll give you $100 to go to the bank and get a loan of $100. I'll give you $100 to go to the bank and get a loan of $100. I'll give you $100 to go to the bank and get a loan of $100.
